ABSTRACT

The most important message for young people to prevent the spread of sexually transmitted diseases (STD) and the Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV) is that refraining from sexual intercourse and alcohol and other drug use is the most effective prevention strategy. Some young people, however, may be unwilling to abstain from sexual activity and/or alcohol and other drug use. Therefore, the annotated resources in this document include selected entries on the national, state, and local levels that provide messages related to risk reduction. This resource document was designed to provide information about technical assistance and education materials that can guide the development, implementation, and evaluation of AIDS education. The resource directory containing over 40 entries offer information about programs whose goals are to prevent the spread of HIV and other STDs among school-aged youth in Wisconsin. An annotated resource list provides nearly 100 citations for materials including audiovisuals, computer disks, books, journals, reports, articles, curricula, pamphlets, magazines and posters for AIDS education and HIV prevention. This document attempts to provide the contacts and the foundation needed for families, communities and schools to fight the spread of AIDS, HIV, and other STDs. (JBJ)

Introduction

This resource document was designed to provide information about technical assistance and educational materials that can guide the development, implementation, and evaluation of AIDS education. The resources also offer information about programs whose goals are to prevent the spread of the Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV) and other sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) among school-aged youth in Wisconsin. The document is divided into two sections: a resource directory and an annotated resource list. As a whole, they provide the contacts and the foundation, respectively, for families, communities, and schools to fight the spread of AIDS, HIV, and other STDs.

It is the position of the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and the Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction (DPI) that parents, communities, and schools must build local partnerships to address youth risk behaviors to provide mutually reinforcing prevention messages to children and youth. The most important message for young people to prevent STDs and HIV is that refraining from sexual intercourse and alcohol and other drug use is the most effective prevention strategy. Wisconsin must strive to create a climate that supports young people who choose to abstain. Some young people, however, may be unwilling to abstain from sexual activity and/or alcohol and other drug use. Therefore, the annotated resources include entries that provide messages related to risk reduction. In addition, the DPI promotes an integrated approach to youth risk behavior prevention programming. Therefore, the list includes resources on issues related to HIV/AIDS.

As a recipient of federal funding from CDC, DPI must abide by the "Requirements for Contents of AIDS-Related Written Materials, Pictorials, Audiovisuals, Questionnaires, Survey Instruments and Educational Sessions in Centers for Disease Control Assistance Programs," as revised June 15, 1992, 57 Federal Register 26742. The requirement states that a program review panel of no less than five persons review and approve all applicable materials prior to their distribution and use in any activities supported by CDC assistance funds.

The program review panel appointed by State Superintendent John Benson reviewed and approved all of the materials in the annotated resource list. The resources listed are for use in a variety of settings. Many of the materials have been approved for use with youth in high risk circumstances and may not be appropriate for use in public schools. The annotations and the reader's discretion are critical in selecting materials that are developmentally and culturally appropriate for the intended audience. This document will continue to be updated periodically as new materials are made available and reviewed.
